Record Series 1102-025, Research and Budget Department photographs (1989) includes fifty photographs taken by Jack Leigh for the 1990 City of Savannah Service Program and Budget publication. Jack Leigh was hired by Robert "Bob" McAlister, director of the Research and Budget Department, to photograph various departments across the City of Savannah government organization. At the time, the Research and Budget Department was a unit within the Management and Financial Services Bureau. Budget Analyst Robert Keber, who worked with the Research and Budget Department from 1986 to 2003, served as a liaison for Jack Leigh as he visited the various City departments to photograph their staff and functions. A selection of the photographs was then featured in the final publication.

Jack Leigh (1948-2004) began his photography career in 1972, focusing on recording the people and environment of his home, the American South. The author of six photography books, including The Ogeechee: A River and Its People, Seaport: A Waterfront At Work, and The Land I'm Bound To, Leigh is most famous for his 1993 photograph of Sylvia Shaw Judson's sculpture Bird Girl taken in Bonaventure Cemetery commissioned for the book cover of the international best seller Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil by John Berendt.
